

ABSTRACT

A retrieving device with an elongated handle at the lower end of which is a basket formed by a series of loops attached to a base mount affixed to the handle, the loops in substantially parallel relation allowing a person in a standing position to retrieve and temporarily store a number of objects scattered on the ground, such as pine cones or magnolia pods.